1. COUNTRY HIGHLIGHTS

Respondents in Croatia remain concerned about climate change, and almost one in five identify this as the most serious problem facing the world (17%, close to the EU average of 15%). Nearly seven in ten respondents consider it a “very serious” problem (69%).

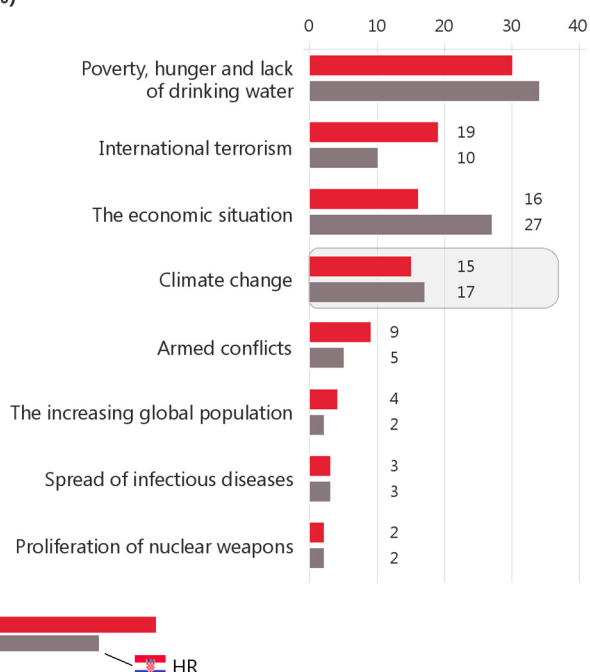

While respondents were less likely than average to say they had taken some action to fight climate change in the past six months (38%, compared to the EU average of 49%), when presented with a list of specific activities, the figure rose to 82%. Practical measures taken include:

- Trying to reduce waste and regularly separate it for recycling (52%, +6 percentage points since 2013)
- Trying to cut down consumption of disposable items whenever possible (47%, +9 percentage points since 2013)
- Buying locally produced and seasonal food whenever possible (40%)

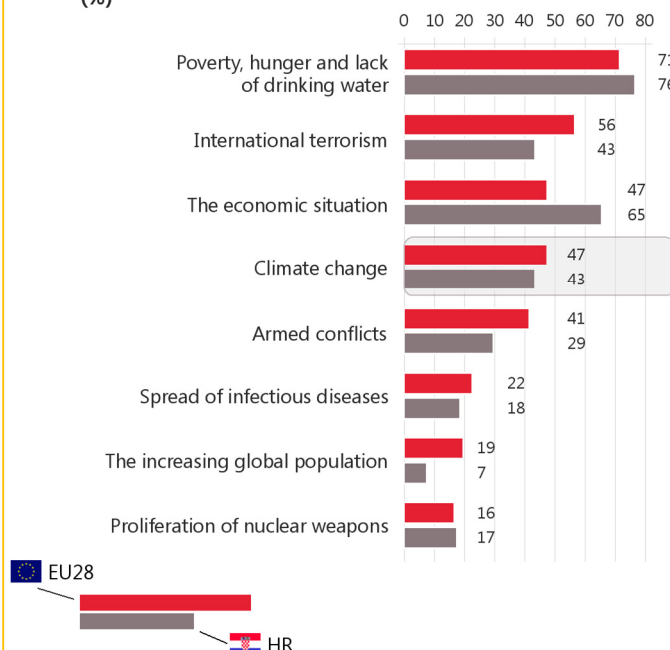

A large majority (81%) agree that fighting climate change and using energy more efficiently can boost the economy and create jobs. Most respondents support national action to increase the use of renewable energy (93%) and improve energy efficiency by 2030 (91%). More than nine in ten (91%) respondents believe that fighting climate change will only be effective if all countries of the world act together.
